Three friends were chatting cheerfully as they were driving down to the south coast of England for their camping holiday. It was getting dark so Danny said that they find somewhere to stay for the night. Soon Mark saw a small hotel by the side of the road.

When they went in, they saw a young policeman talking with some people. The strange thing was that the people were wearing very old-fashioned clothes! Tom took a few photoes and they stayed the night. The next morning, they paid the bill, which seemed extremaly cheap, and then they left.

A week later, the friends decided to stay at the hotel again. Unfortunately, though, they could not find it, so they stayed somewhere else. As soon as they got home, Tom got his photographs developed. While he was looking at the pictures of the hotel, he saw only his friends and a small white creature behind them.

Tom felt very troubled, so he went back with Danny to find the hotel. When they arrived where they thought it had been, all they could find were two ruined buildings. Puzzled, they asked a passer-by about the hotel. "Oh, there used to be a hotel here," the old men told the friends, " but it closed about a hundred years ago. There was a police station right next to it." Immediately, both men remembered the policeman they had seen sitting in the hotel. They both were so shocked that they couldn't move. They had spent the night with ghosts of the past!
